The Joint Commission has released its annual report of top performing hospitals as part of its Top Performers on Key Quality Measures program. The report, Improving America's Hospitals: The Joint Commission's Annual Report on Quality and Safety 2012, named 620 hospitals as exemplary performers based on data reported in 2011.

The list includes 50 percent more hospitals than 2011, and 244 hospitals have achieved status on the list for two consecutive years. Each hospital had to meet two 95 percent performance thresholds to be included on the list.

According to the report, to make the cut hospitals had to do two things:

First, each hospital achieved performance of 95 percent or above on a single, composite score that includes all the accountability measures for which it reports data to The Joint Commission, including measures that had fewer than 30 eligible cases or patients. Second, each hospital met or exceeded 95 percent performance on every accountability measure for which it reports data to The Joint Commission, excluding any measures with fewer than 30 eligible cases or patients.
